

We are all Magi

Qabala and Alchemy agree that the universe consists of a group of 10 levels of different and growing densities. 10 levels of energy and consciousness, each one constituting a world. Ours, the 10th, is the densest; and the other 9, above, are less and less dense, and are normally invisible. But what we must still remember is that these invisible worlds have an energy that increases even as their density decreases. Therefore World 9 has a power much higher than that of World 10, World 8 has a higher energy than World 9, and so on until 1. So World 1 supplies power to World 2, which in turn powers 3, and onward down to 10, our World. In our case, it is the existing structures of World 9 that continuously determine material or other structures of our plane.

Not talked about because little known is that our thinking is not of our World. Our thoughts, or the animation of our consciousness, is an energy of World 9. This is also a general rule. Thought of World 9 is the energy of World 8, thought of level 8 is the energy of 7 and so on. So when we evolve in World 9 after having definitively left our material realm, our thinking and our consciousness will then be the energy of World 8.

If we understand that in the 10 Worlds energy is inversely proportional to density, we are able to understand the mechanisms of magic. As a result, we have two kinds of beings on this Earth, those who know the nature of thought and, therefore, know how to use it as a tool of power, whatever its application. They are aware mages. Others, who use thought without knowing its occult practices, are unaware mages, which almost all of us are since our childhood.

Thought has the same creative power for all. If, using our ability to think, we are building a mental vision of the subject or the object at the same time, gradually in the Astral a structure will be created consistent with our visualization. And sooner or later this image is physically realized in the visible world of Earth. Obviously, mere thought does not readily set images in the Astral, visualization and repetition are necessary to obtain the crystallization.

We insist, as this is a major rule in magic that everything existing in our World (10) comes from the Astral (9), supplying us with energy, and allowing the coagulation of its matter in ours. Said differently, the structure created in the Astral acts as a mold for matter or for the action of energy in our world.

Each World is governed by its own laws, and every living being in a World is subject to its laws. We cannot escape this rule and in the case of the thoughts we emit, they follow the process outlined above. We have to decide the orientation we want to give our thoughts. We know we have a tendency to "bitch." Undoubtedly, this proceeds from an intense need to denounce what is unbearable as well as to reject what bothers us.

In doing so, we erroneously feed the Astral of World 9, in which, we repeat, the matrixes of our World are created. Therefore, negative thoughts which are gradually fixed in the Astral will accumulate to grow misfortunes and difficulties in our world.

Fortunately, living in a dual system, we have the power to feed the Astral in the opposite manner. So ... think positively and:

Peace on earth to men of good will.

Jean DUBUIS

